

I have been a Business Education Teacher for the past 21 years at St. Croix Central High School. I am passionate about teaching students to use and master application software, but I am most excited to get my students to learn to key by touch. I believe that having a good command of the keyboard is a life skill that all students should master. This training prepares them to adapt and thrive in any field of study, as the proficient use of computers is a valuable skill that is an asset in the world of work. I am a current/active 16-year member of the National Business Education Association (NBEA). My membership in NBEA allows me to remain abreast of changes and trends in business education and provides valuable training opportunities and the ability to connect with other business educators throughout the country and the world. I have served as a Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) Local Chapter Adviser and State Adviser.
